Cycling for WaterAid

I'm off cycling again. Exchanging the wilds of the school garden and Barking for the continent!

Two years ago I cycled across France, from the English Channel to the Mediterranean. People sponsored me to raise money for WaterAid, a charity that works with some of the world's poorest people to provide clean drinking water and proper sanitation. We raised £1200 for WaterAid.

This year I'm going to cycle down the River Danube, starting from its source near the Black Forest in south-western Germany, and then crossing Germany, Austria, Slovakia, and Hungary and maybe more depending on how tired my legs are.

I would like to do a thousand miles, perhaps more.

I have the same motive to raise some money for WaterAid. I'm hoping the kids will get involved with a non-school uniform day and that the £1 that they bring in will go to this very worthwhile charity. If anyone would like to sponsor me then follow the link below to my page on JustGiving from where the money goes direct to WaterAid.

I shall try and keep the school posted with updates of where I have got to and photos of what I have seen.

Many Thanks

Martin Brown

PS. Children please keep watering your sunflowers.
